SHATTERED mom Anne-marie Ohlson said, "Second best was never good enough for my daughter. From the moment the results were announced, she never ate another bite or slept another wink."

Stunning Stella Ohlson was so devastated when her best buddy beat her out in a beauty contest that she stormed home — and literally died of jealousy!

"Stella was the runner-up in the pageant, but second best was never good enough for my little girl," anguished mom Anne-marie Ohlson told reporters in Stockholm, Sweden.

"She was particularly upset because it was her best friend Inger who won the title. She absolutely couldn't stand it.

"From the moment the results were announced, she never ate another bite and never slept another wink. "She just curled up in her room and died of envy."

The eye-popping pinup girl's tragic tantrum began shortly after she and lifelong friend Inger Eriksson, 23, entered a beauty contest sponsored by a European cosmetics company.

"There were more than 30 girls in the pageant, but Stella was sure she was going to win because she was always winning beauty contests," said her heartsick sister Greta, 26.

"Stella didn't think Inger stood a chance in hell of winning because it was the very first pageant Inger had ever entered.

"She just kept saying, 'I hope poor Inger doesn't embarrass herself. I hope she doesn't get her feelings hurt when I win the pageant.'

BEAUTY CONTEST JEALOUSY!

win and leave Inger in the dust."

But when the votes were in, it was gorgeous, green-eyed Inger who wore the diamond-studded tiara — with stunned Stella, 24, holding the bag in second place.

"Stella tried to act like she was happy for me, but I could tell she was very shook-up," grieving Inger recalled. "Her face was white as a ghost and she could barely talk.

"It was the first time she'd lost a beauty contest in quite a while — and I know she hated losing to me more than anybody else in the world.

"There was a big party after the pageant and Stella loved to party, but she was so upset that she stormed out of the auditorium and rushed straight on home."

And five days later, the shattered secretary was dead.

A coroner's inquest concluded the shapely lady died of stress resulting from unknown causes — but teary-eyed Anne-marie insists there is no mystery surrounding her daughter's death.

"Stella went into her room that night and never came out, despite all our pleading," said the mortified mom.

"She thought she was the most beautiful girl in the world and she couldn't believe a panel of judges had picked Inger over her.

"She was angry, she was hurt, she was in absolute shock.

"My daughter died of jealousy, pure and simple."

SEXY Stella Ohlson was used to winning beauty competitions. Coming in second was such a blow to her ego that she went into shock and died.

Eskimos killing walruses to get money for drugs, say U.S. wildlife officials

Drug-crazed Eskimos have been running around slaughtering rare Alaskan wildlife — and selling the spoils for money to feed their nasty habit, U.S. officials say.

Undercover agents worked for the past two years to bust a massive ring of poachers who have skinned and beheaded walruses, polar bears and seals for their valuable fur and ivory. An ivory tusk could sell for as much as $5,000, officials said.

Agents filmed poachers opening fire into herds of walrus then approaching the dead ones and hacking off their heads. The money made from selling skins and ivory bought drugs that Eskimos took into their villages to use and sell, officials said.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service say they've nabbed 29 of these culprits and are hunting down another 80.

SUICIDE SHOCKER

Mom, son walk naked into the cold — and freeze to death!

By SHAWN DEENA
Staff writer

Loving mother Patricia Von Tellrop committed suicide by walking naked into the snow — and forced her 6-year-old son to die with her.

Von Tellrop, 39, apparently took her child into the bitter cold, stripped him of his pajamas and waited for him to die in 20 degree weather before she too froze to death, Indiana State Police said.

"She was sick, tired and somewhat upset," her husband James told police.

He told police his wife was angry over the treatment she received at a hospital a few days before her death. She was being treated for strep throat, asthma and bronchitis, James told cops. But the way the hospital handled it was not to her liking, the grieving husband explained.

Jimmy, their only child, had been at another hospital a month earlier for an allergic reaction to antibiotics. He was still recuperating from his treatment before his death. Baffled police are still uncertain of Mrs. Von Tellrop's motive for the suicide. A confused note she left behind revealed she was angry but did not explain why she killed herself.

"Her husband told us that she had been acting strangely a few days before," Sgt. Tom Jarvis said.

When James called his Nashville, Ind., home the day of the deaths, his wife did not answer, so he called a neighbor and asked him to check on his family. The neighbor went to the house, found the door wide open and called police.

"Soon after we arrived we found the woman about 200-300 yards behind the house and the child was discovered about an hour later on top of a hill," Sgt. Jarvis said.

Investigators deduced that Von Tellrop was already naked when she took her son outside because the only clothing found were the boy's pajamas. Tracks show that after removing the boy's clothes, she put him down in the snow and paced back and forth near the body until she finally collapsed. "In weather like that with no protection you would freeze in a couple of hours," Sgt. Jarvis said.

Both bodies were frozen 8 to 12 hours before they were discovered, according to police. The area in the back of the house was searched for a third set of human footprints but none were found, ruling out foul play.

Christa McAuliffe and Michael Smith are alive and well, say men taken aboard alien spaceship

Jon Pierdon

Pierre Montant

By SCOTTY PAUL
Special correspondent

Astronauts Christa McAuliffe and Michael Smith were miraculously rescued from the flaming wreckage of the space shuttle Challenger in 1986, say two French seminarians who claim they talked to them aboard an alien spaceship — only two weeks ago!

The seminary students — Pierre Montant, 43, and Jon Pierdon, 41 — said the meeting occurred on an alien spaceship that beamed them aboard near New Orleans, La., where they were vacationing from Paris, France.

"We were walking across a field when the spaceship appeared from beyond some trees. It whirled above us for a few seconds. Believe me, we were scared to death," Montant said. "Suddenly we were blinded by an intense light. It was like we had been sucked into the sun itself. Then we blacked out.

"The first person I saw when I awakened was Mrs. McAuliffe. She introduced us to Smith and the three alien crew members."

The 37-year-old teacher from New Hampshire and Smith, 40, the space shuttle pilot, were believed to have died along with five other astronauts when the Challenger blew up.

The ill-fated shuttle was soaring into space at 1,977 m.p.h. 75 seconds after launch when the right-hand solid fuel booster rocket erupted in flames. The shuttle exploded and crashed in the Atlantic off Cape Kennedy.

What America and the rest of the world didn't know is that an alien spaceship was less than 10 miles away at the time of the crash!

The aliens quickly locked in McAuliffe and Smith were still alive but that the others were dead, according to what the students were told.

The two survivors were then beamed aboard and hospitalized for months after with severe head injuries. "They credited advanced laser technology and gene transplants for saving their lives," Pierdon said.

"I'm not saying they were robot-like, but there was definitely something different about them," Pierdon added. "There was nothing wrong with their minds but they talked much slower than you would expect."

Smith said he and Mrs. McAuliffe have been helping the aliens experiment with solutions to the universal pollution problems, the future of space exploration and advances in medical sciences.

"You can be sure that every planet in the universe is concerned about the effects of Earth's tremendous pollution on them," Smith told the two Frenchmen.

The hottest new status symbol for yuppies is their very own private 800 telephone line.

Now fast-lane folks can have their own phone number that friends can call toll-free, no matter where they live.

The service, now offered by companies like Sprint and MCI, costs from $5 to $15 a month with a 14 to 25 cent fee per minute.

"Upfront we saw the pure vanity," said John Heiman, Sprint's product manager for 800 services.

"I think the jury is still out in terms of how big it's going to get, but it's doing better than expected."

ED WHITE and his sister Anja argued constantly, say cops.

Family feud ends in Teen pumps 8 slugs into sister — in fuss over chores, cops say

By SHAWN DEENA
Staff writer

Ed White and his sister Anja argued constantly over the household chores — until one day Ed got so mad that he took a rifle and blew his sister away, cops say.

Police recorded a call with a male voice saying, "There's a female shot multiple times and she's probably dead," according to Public Affairs Officer Gwen Moore of Sandy, Utah.

When cops arrived on the scene they found White, 18, waiting while his sister, 15, lay dead in a pool of blood on her bed. She had been shot eight times — twice in the head and six times in the torso.

"The impression was that this argument over chores was never ending," Moore said.

The father worked long hours and the housework was left to the kids, she said. The brother apparently felt he had the bulk of the responsibility while his sister did little or nothing at all. The suspect apparently felt he was being treated unfairly, she added.

Police found an unfinished letter in the girl's room addressed to her father. It described how she feared for her life because her brother bullied her, Moore said.

"The victim wrote that her brother always called her lazy and selfish and she wanted to leave home," she said. "She was sincerely concerned that he would do something to her."

The father, John White, never saw the letter. He was not home at the time of the shooting nor was another brother, Joe, 18.

The three kids had been living with their dad since their parents divorced, officials said.

Ed White was arrested and charged with criminal homicide and his bail was denied. If convicted, he faces a life sentence.

Docs hunt patient with ear on his leg!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Dumbfounded docs are looking high and low for mangled Patrick Neary — so they can remove his severed ear from his right thigh and sew it back onto his head!

Surgeons stitched hapless Pat's right ear to his leg in hopes of keeping the tissue alive after the thing was gnawed off during a barroom brawl late last year.

Doctors sent the rugged construction worker home with the chomped-off ear still attached to his thigh, telling him to return when his horrifying head injury had healed enough for them to put the appendage back in its rightful place.

And now it's time for strapping Pat, 32, to undergo that second round of surgery — but to have disappeared off the face of the earth.

"Quite frankly, we just don't know where the heck he is," harried hospital manager Dominic Conlin told reporters in East Grinstead, England.

"We've been calling him and writing him, but nobody seems to know what's happened to him. It can't be too comfortable running around with your ear sewed to your leg, so if he'd just call us we'd take care of it for him."

Vanishing Patrick's "earie" adventure began last December when he walked past a himself in the middle of a knock-down, drag-out donnybrook.

"The fight had spilled out onto the sidewalk, and when Mr. Neary walked by, an unknown assailant came up and bit off his ear," a police investigator recalled. "It wasn't Mr. Neary's fault. He was just in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Fortunately, a quick-witted witness picked up Patrick's bloody ear, packed it in a glass of ice he'd borrowed from the bartender and rushed it to the hospital along with the mutilated laborer.

"The doctors managed to clean up the ear and graft it onto the patient's leg," said the hospital spokesman. "Now we'd like to put it back on his head where it belongs — if he'd just

DOOMED CANCER PATIENT'S SUICIDE MIRACLE!

Man shoots brain tumor out of his head — and saves his life!

By SCOTTY PAUL
Correspondent

A desperate trucker shot himself in the head rather than suffer the slow, painful death of a malignant brain tumor. But the bullet miraculously destroyed the tumor — and saved his life.

"It was a million to one shot. The 9-mm bullet blasted the tumor right out of his head but didn't touch other vital areas," said neurosurgeon Dr. Balint Rady. "I still can't believe it happened."

The incredibly lucky patient is Arpad Zekeres, a 38-year-old delivery truck driver from Debrecen, Hungary.

"I should be dead but I'm very much alive and feeling better than I ever did before," Zekeres told interviewers. "Fortunately, the bullet left all my senses intact. I should be out of the hospital in a week or two."

Rady discovered the tennis ball-size tumor several months ago but decided to treat it with chemotherapy instead of operating.

"His chances of surviving the ordeal were slim, but I hoped the medicine would control the cancer and keep it from spreading," Rady said.

But the chemo treatments didn't make life better for Zekeres. He suffered horrifying headaches most of his waking hours. Soon the God-awful pain spread to other parts of his body.

"The pain was indescribable ...worse than anyone could imagine," Zekeres told reporters. "I took more and more medicine. After a few months I was living like a zombie, incapable of working or living a normal life. It was an endless nightmare. I didn't want to continue living."

'God has given me a second chance'

Zekeres borrowed a 9-mm handgun from a friend, bought a bottle of vodka and waited for his wife to go shopping.

"I slugged down about half a fifth of vodka for courage before I put the pistol to my head and pulled the trigger. I woke up in the hospital six days later with my wife Magda at my side," he said.

Rady said the bullet broke the tumor into several pieces. "All we had to do was pick up the pieces, remove the bullet and clean out the wound to ward off infection," he said. "If the bullet had been a thousandth of an inch to either side, he would have been a dead man."

Zekeres feels he has been given a second chance at life.

"I thank God every day for the second chance. It is great to be alive and free of that terrible pain," he said.

MIND-BOGGLING LUCK! Arpad Zekeres holds the gun he used to blast the deadly tumor out of his head.

Two Los Angeles cops got more than they bargained for when they checked out an abandoned car and stumbled across two corpses that allegedly were being dismembered by a pair of blood-drenched ex-Russian soldiers!

The accused killers were identified as 28-year-old Sergoei Ivanov and 31-year-old Alexandar Nikolaev. It isn't known if the two men are still Russian citizens.

Both are charged with murder "with special circumstances," which, under California law, makes them prime candidates for the gas chamber. The suspects have pleaded not guilty and are being held without bond.

"The two bodies were found by two deputies who, if you can believe it, were investigating the report of an abandoned car in West Hollywood," L.A. County Sheriff's spokesman Mary Landreth said.

"When they knocked on the door of a house at 8040 West Knoll Dr., it was answered by a man who was drenched in blood. As the deputies talked to him, he suddenly pulled a gun from his pocket.

"The deputies wrestled the gun away from him and began to search the house. They found two dead men in the initial stages of being dismembered. The victims had been shot. Their fingers had been severed in an attempt to prevent identification (through fingerprints) and allow the suspects to flee the state."

Cops, however, have identified the victims as Russian nationals Andrey Kuznetsov and Vladimir Litvinenko. It hasn't yet been determined if any of the four are Russian nationals or naturalized U.S. citizens.

A source close to the investigation said the two suspects were blood-drenched because they had begun to dismember the corpses and place the body parts in large plastic trash bags.

"Apparently they both were doing the cutting when the deputies knocked on the door," the source said.

"You don't usually come across bodies like this — not even in L.A. County."

The two murder suspects are scheduled for a preliminary hearing in March.

MR. T CALLS THE QUEEN A TIGHTWAD!

BITTER T: The rough-talking Mr. T had some mean words for the money-hungry Queen of England.

Old skinflint should sell the crown jewels and help the poor, A-team star says!

While in Liverpool for a show-biz photo-op Mr. T took time out from his busy schedule to sock it to the skinflint Queen of England to cough up some of her money to help the poor!

"You're the world's wealthiest woman," said Mr. T. "Share your wealth with the people like I do." The TV tough-guy claims he gives at least $5,000 a month to charity.

"The Queen's got jewels, a crown on her head, priceless paintings, but stuff treasure, palaces and mansions, yet people are homeless," said the gold-laded A-team guerrilla.

T went on to chastise the Queen for ignoring the troubles currently afflicting the United Kingdom.

"That woman sees all the need but does nothing. There's something very wrong and it takes a straight-talking guy like me to say it," he said, getting a little hot under $250,000 worth of gold chains around his muscled neck.

"She pays no taxes — that's insulting. I've seen the struggle that's going on in England. That a few folks should be rolling in riches like that is a bunch of garbage."

The shocking suggestion that the Queen share the wealth sparked a storm of protest over there.

Novelist Barbara Cartland, Princess Diana's stepgrandma, was beside herself in anger. "This man should keep his mouth shut," she fumed. "It's appalling he has said these things when he obviously doesn't know what he's talking about."

Brit telly comic Bernard Manning was equally emphatic. "The Queen is our beloved leader. Her people admire her and know exactly how hard she works. And if Mr. T doesn't like it, he can lump it." So take that, Fool!

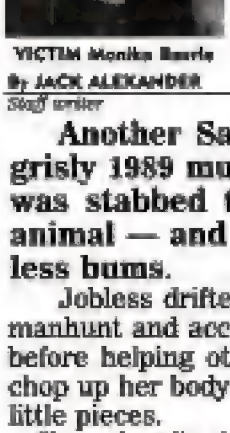
Satanists chop up dancer — to make soup for the homeless!



VICTIM Monika Beerle

Cultists kill, then chop woman into stew meat during ritual, cops say

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Another Satan worshipper has been arrested in the grisly 1989 murder of go-go dancer Monika Beerle, who was stabbed to death, skinned and butchered like an animal — and her bones boiled to make soup for homeless bums.

Jobless drifter Randy Easterday was captured after a 29-month manhunt and accused of plunging a knife into the 26-year-old victim before helping others chop up her body into little pieces.

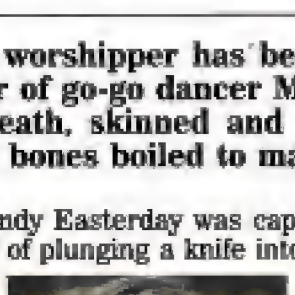
Charged earlier in the grisly, ritualistic murder was Daniel Rakowitz, 30, known in New York City as the "Butcher of Tompkins Square Park."

He was judged to be crazy and locked up in a nuthouse rubber room a year ago after telling jurors how he boiled her bones and made soup.

After preparing the human soup, Rakowitz went out on the street and brought two homeless bums in for soup and crackers, cops said.

Rakowitz claimed the bums polished off two bowls of soup each.

"I am not saying this was a satanic cult murder, but we believe a bizarre ceremony was carried out during the killing by devil worshippers," said New York police inspector Joseph Saccavino.



CRAZY Daniel Rakowitz, left, was tossed in the nuthouse after he told jurors of his part in the grisly murder. Randy Easterday, right, is the second devil worshipper charged in the case.

Patrick Geoffrois said cops believe he was the high priest behind the slaughter of Monika Beerle.

"They are trying to say I directed the dismemberment of Monika," said Geoffrois, who insisted he had nothing to do with the murder.

He said cops confiscated a 15-inch ceremonial dagger, a tal pentagram from his apartment.

Jurors gagged and covered their mouths in disgust when Rakowitz told how he chopped up his go-go dancer girlfriend, sprayed deodorant on her body parts and then put them in a pet litter box so they wouldn't stink.

"The body parts started to long-haired, bearded weirdo testified.

Cops may not have uncovered the horrifying murder if a friend of the victim hadn't stopped by Rakowitz' apartment and asked where she was. He reached in a pot on the stove and held up his girlfriend's severed head.

Easterday, 27, was charged tampering with evidence — Beerle's corpse. A grand jury could indict him for murder.

"The arrest of Easterday resulted from an informant who said Easterday had admitted dismembering the victim. We are not looking for anyone else in connection with the case," Saccavino said.

Why have 70,620 satisfied people consulted David Phild?

WHO IS DAVID PHILD?

As you have without doubt during recent years, many astrologers or clairvoyants offer miracle solutions to people who haven't found love, money, health, etc. They extraordinary themselves as magicians of happiness, but can't keep their promises. At the same time, famous DAVID PHILD has gone beyond commonplace frontiers and confidence is raised day by day. It is not by mere chance that more than 70,000 people from all backgrounds, certainly from around the world, have consulted David.

We have tried to find out how a superior clairvoyant astrologer such as David Phild functions in today's frantic times.

Already his life is a very unusual story.

"Living for eighteen years in the islands," explains David Phild, "strongly influenced my interest in the esoteric and divinatory sciences. I have lived in Madagascar and in the Antilles, on the island of Maurice. But I was lucky enough to Madagascar, that magical land where there are rites and practices of master African sorcerers, to find an extraordinary old woman. She was a clairvoyant and a healer who was adored by everyone. She took me under her protection and wisdom. And I became her disciple. She had the deepest appreciation of my gift of visions, that rare ability to foreknow events, but above all, the power to help and enlighten. My calling was born by this but I will always remember her golden rule: "Do only what is within your power, because you are not God – you are only a physician of the soul."

Golden Rule

Unlike others, David has made this his own golden rule and will never make you any empty promises. He is not among that clan of thieves who make deceitful and imaginary offers of help, those charlatans who have no consideration for their profession. One doesn't play with the destiny of a human being. What is promised you, he is able to do. This is why his faithful clients have appreciated him for so long. His method of working is based on a relationship of complicity which, but above all, on warm personal relations no office lacking with others.

Predictions

You may have seen him on television or heard him on the radio. David Phild is always run after by the press because he has made some rather exceptional predictions. He was the first to announce the freeing of the hostages in Lebanon toward the end of 1981. And it was David Phild who announced the evacuation of the Russian troops from Afghanistan, the departure of Mobutu and many other equally amazing predictions. He has also done astro-readings for Julio Iglesias, Lady Di, Reagan, and even Michael Jackson!

Right now he is preparing a book about the great events that are going to happen world-wide. But he made concern is still the support and help he provides to thousands of people seeking the only reason for living and existing: the joy of living and happiness.

WIMPY ACTIVISTS ARE AT IT AGAIN, SAYS ED

CALL Ed's pet bull terrier 'Dodger' a companion animal, and he'll teach you a lesson you'll never forget!

I'm madder than my bull terrier at a cat show over that bunch of nincompoop animal lovers who want to outlaw the term "pet."

That's right, folks! These fruitcakes say calling your dog or cat a pet is insensitive and you oughta call them "companion animals."

"To call an animal with whom you share your life a 'pet' is reminiscent of men's magazines where you have the Pet of the Month," sniffed Humane Society bigwig Michael Fox.

And that's not all. Instead of calling all us pet owners "masters," these wackos want to call us "human companions of the non-human companions."

BOY, 12, STOPS RUNAWAY BUS!

BRAVE sixth grader Kenny Perrone brought a runaway school bus to a stop after the driver passed out at the wheel.

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Heroic sixth grader Kenny Perrone saved 33 classmates from death when he grabbed the steering wheel of a runaway school bus and brought it to a stop — barely scraping a utility pole that would have split it open like a ripe melon!

When veteran driver Don Snyder suddenly slumped over unconscious, his foot depressed the accelerator and the bus began gaining speed as it careened wildly along a highway near Dunnellon, Fla. Fortunately, 12-year-old Kenny was sitting right behind Snyder.

"I could tell there was something wrong with him, so I kept watching him," the gutsy wonderboy said.

"Then he just pitched forward and the bus started swerving all over the place. I thought he must have had a heart attack.

"The bus was going faster and faster. I grabbed the wheel and and tried to steer, but his foot was on the gas pedal. I bent down and pulled his foot off and the bus started to slow down.

"I was trying to steer and trying to hit the brakes, but Mr. Snyder was in my way. My friend, Aaron Brown, reached over and held Mr. Snyder back so I could get to the brake pedal.

"Then we started to go off the road and the bus was heading straight for a telephone pole. I pushed on the brake pedal with all my strength and tried to steer the bus away. The side of the bus scraped along the pole and finally stopped."

Kenny's mom, Susan, is convinced that many of the children on the bus would have been killed or seriously injured if her son hadn't been sitting where he could see the driver.

"He saw his dad have three heart attacks so he knows what that looks like," the 40-year-old mother of two explained. "He could tell that the driver was having some kind of medical problem, so he never took his eyes off him.

"When Mr. Snyder passed out, Kenny knew if the bus wasn't stopped, there would be a terrible accident and some of his friends would be severely injured.

"So he stopped the bus and no one was hurt. I'm as proud of him as any mother could be."

According to Susan, Snyder apparently suffered a reaction to medication he had just started taking.

He's been given a clean bill of health and is back driving his school bus, she said.

Babysitter bites off girl's toes!

An 11-year-old girl apparently went berserk while babysitting her 3-week-old sister — and bit off two of the baby's toes and part of her ear.

"We have no idea what provoked it," said Denver Police Det. David Meixler, who said cops haven't decided whether to file charges. The toddler was in fair condition, but docs were unable to reattach the toes.

A few minutes after she was asked to watch her baby sister, the 11-year-old took the crying baby to her mother and handed her one of the toes.

Sperm bank mom's shocking revelation:

THIS IS THE FATHER OF MY CHILD!

FLORA Quinton, above, says sperm bank semen from a low-life bum, shown below, caused her to have an ugly and defective baby, inset.

She gives birth to ugly baby after shysters sell her semen — from a BUM!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

Special correspondent

Six young mothers have banded together to sue an association of sperm banks, claiming that the banks used street bums as donors — and as a result, their babies are ugly and stupid.

The New Zealand moms, all of whom have children under 2 years of age, claim the fertility clinics that arranged for their artificial insemination procedures saved money by hiring below-average males to provide semen.

They say they have proof that a number of the donors were either skid-row bums or inmates at prisons and institutions for the mentally ill.

"My baby is a terrible disappointment to me," said Flora Quinton, 27, an angry mother from Christchurch, New Zealand. "He is cross-eyed, he is months behind in his development, he is much smaller than normal babies his age. He doesn't look like me or anyone I know, believe me. He is downright ugly."

Mrs. Quinton, the wife of a Sydney attorney, says she paid $4,000 to be artificially inseminated in 1990 after doctors disclosed that her husband could not have children. The procedure worked on the first try and she became pregnant with a boy, Simon, who was born in January 1991.

When her baby was two months old, Mrs. Quinton says she realized that her child was defective mentally and physically and contacted the sperm bank to complain. They refused to speak with her.

"I was shocked when they

Mrs. Quinton remembered. "So I began investigating them. I found out they were part of an association of sperm banks that had produced a whole raft of unsatisfactory babies."

The angry mom's investigation has since turned up other women who were unhappy with their children and now the group is preparing a lawsuit.

Their research has turned up shocking examples of low-life donors, she says.

"One donor was a convicted rapist," Mrs. Quinton said. "Two were inmates in an institution for the mentally ill. One of the sperm banks even recruited wimos right off the streets in places like Wellington and Christchurch."

Mrs. Quinton says she and her husband are determined to raise their baby, but she wants to spare other young parents the anguish she and her husband have suffered.

"We're determined to put these people out of business so they can't destroy other lives like they have destroyed ours."

I'm living high on the hog with my lard-butt sweetie!

Confidential

Dear Curious in Lineville: If I've told you pinheads once, I've told you a thousand times — honesty may or may not be the best policy. It depends on the circumstances!

Dear Worried in Old Mills: The way I see it you can do one of two things: Tell your boyfriend the truth now or wait until he gets herpes, too!

Dear Angry in Preston: If I'm so stupid, why are you asking me for advice?

Dear Hot Stuff in Carroll: I've got a better idea — why don't you go die?

Dear Stinky in Arcadia: You're telling me! I had to put a clothespin on my nose to read your letter!

Dear Desperate Gal in Talmo: Don't be stupid: Real men DON'T wear brassieres!

Dotti will answer your letters — and tell it like it is. Just write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

Dear Dotti: People tease me about my wife because she's got one of the biggest — and I do mean BIGGEST — butts in the world today. I'm an easygoing kind of guy so the teasing doesn't really bother me.

I just wanted to write and let all your readers know that while big-butt-bumed gals like mine are easy to poke fun at, they really do make sensational lovers — absolutely the greatest on Earth. So tell all those men out there to give lard-butt ladies their due, Dotti. Playmate-types might look good in the nudie books, but queen-sized ladies like mine make the best mates! — Happy Guy in Henryville

Dear Happy: Big fat pigs don't do a thing for me, but if you say your lard-butt lady is tops in the love department I'm sure willing to take your word for it!

I'm 29 but my parents treat me like a 6-year-old!

Dear Dotti: I'm mad at my parents because they treat me like a child. I'm in love with a guy who is 27 years old. I'm 29 myself. But mommy and daddy act like I'm a little girl of 6. They control my life and won't let me do anything that I want to do. How can I make them see that I'm big enough to do things for myself? — Mad in Savannah

Dear Angry: A 29-year-old woman who calls her parents "mommy" and "daddy" is clearly a child at heart. With that in mind you can do one of two things. Let your parents rule your life — or grow up!

Sorry your mom died but I'm sure she's in heaven!

Dear Dotti: In a recent column you mentioned the tragic cancer death of your mother and I just want you to know I sympathize with you completely. I'm praying for you, dear. And as a devout Christian, I just know your beloved mom went to heaven. — Joyce in Kentucky

Dear Joyce: I'd like to take this opportunity to thank you and the thousands of readers who sent cards and letters to cheer me up in my hour of need. Folks like you restore my faith in humanity — and prove there really is a God in heaven!

You oughta be whipped for the lousy advice you give!

Dear Dotti: You ought to be horsewhipped! People write to you for advice and all you do is insult them like you're queen of the world. Well, you aren't queen of the world. And if you any one nasty thing about me I'll beat the crap out of you. — Irritated in Hickory

Dear Angry: Don't tell me how to write my column and I won't tell you to sit on a broomstick, jerk!

My boss made me eat raw fish and I almost puked!

Dear Dotti: My boss took me out to a Japanese restaurant and insisted I eat some raw fish. I thought he was joking so I said sure. I couldn't believe it when the waiter returned with a platter of raw fish. My boss fell all over himself to get his hands on that garbage but I fought the urge to throw up. I finally told him I had a bad case of the trots and excused myself but I was sure too proud of myself for having to lie to him. Dotti, what would you have done? — Wondering in St. Louis

Dear Wondering: I would have grabbed your so-called waiter and said: "I'll take the fillet on the far left, pinhead — well done!"

Ask the Countess

Will ancient Egyptian charm make me rich?

Dear Countess: My doctor just told me that I have terminal cancer and advised me to get my affairs in order because I'm going to die soon.

I'll be leaving a wife and my four children behind, Countess, and I'd like to leave them a little extra cash to live on after I'm gone. DIVER swims near Nessie after its capture in the huge lake in Scotland.

LOCH NESS MONSTER

Nessie caught in huge steel net — baited with 3,000 pounds of tuna!

By ZACK HAGAR
Special correspondent

EDINBURGH, Scotland — Scientists from seven countries captured the Loch Ness monster in a steel net baited with tuna fish on December 22 and have now provided the world with the first clear photographs of a creature that has intrigued mankind since it was first sighted 1300 years ago — in 690 A.D.!

It is not yet known what the researchers plan to do with the 70-foot, 20-ton beast. But it is believed that they will release it after they finish taking blood and tissue samples, possibly by the end of the April.

"This is it. This is the proof we've been waiting for," Dr. Michel Genet, the French zoologist who headed the team of experts who captured the monster, told reporters here.

"For the first time since the creature was sighted in the distant past we know for a fact that it does exist. The task before us now is to determine exactly what it is.

"It's much too early to attempt to name or classify the monster," he added. "But my gut feeling tells me that we've caught what may be the last dinosaur on Earth."

The capture of the Loch Ness monster, which the world knows as Nessie, capped a 3-year, $9 million research project that was organized by Dr. Genet and supported by scientists in France, Italy, Belgium, Germany, Sweden, Norway and the United States.

In spite of the potential rewards, the decision to search for the creature didn't come easy — because the vast majority of scientists in Europe and the United States considered the Loch Ness monster to be a myth.

"From the very beginning we understood that our professional reputations were on the line," said Dr. Genet. "Many of our colleagues treated us as a laughingstock and one science journal actually suggested that we forget about the Loch Ness monster and search for Santa Claus instead."

Undaunted, the research team set up a base of operations in January 1989 and spent the next 32 months mapping the floor of the legendary Scottish lake with underwater cameras and sonar.

Once they had familiarized themselves with the monster's turf, they baited a 175-foot metal net with 3,000 pounds of raw tuna fish and lowered it into the loch.

Dog calls it quits after 11 years as mayor of California town

By JACK ALEXANDER/Staff writer

During his 11 years as mayor of Sunol, Calif., Bosco was entertained at the Japanese embassy, appeared on national TV shows and never lost an election. It wasn't a bad life — for a dog.

The easygoing, 70-pound part Labrador, part Rottweiler has been forced to step down as the head of the tiny hamlet of 500 because his owner, Tom Stillman, moved to nearby Livermore.

"This town is still in a state of shock," said Virginia McCullough.

"Bosco was the spirit of this community. He was not like most politicians. He never lied, didn't cheat and never took a bribe.

"He got free beef jerky from guys at the corner saloon from time to time, but he never promised them anything in return, so we don't consider that a bribe," she was quick to add.

Bosco was first elected mayor in 1980, defeating two humans. He was unchallenged four years later and won his third four-year term three years ago against two other dogs.

"That strong-minded mutt had the respect of this entire town," said Tom's mother, Pat Stillman. "He represented the fierce independence and pride of this town. With him as our leader, we were successful in fighting off developers for years."

A group of Japanese officials visited Sunol several years ago and were shocked when they shook the mayor's paw. They later invited Bosco to the Japanese embassy in San Francisco.

"They wanted to know why we had a dog for a mayor, so I asked them if they knew who was mayor of Chicago, Detroit and Miami. When they said 'No,' I pointed out thousands of people know who Bosco is."

He has been written up in national publications — including The Weekly World News — and he's been on national TV.

RETIRED — Hizzoner Bosco.

The NEWS reported Bosco's disappearance in 1988.

It turned out he had dozed off in the back of a pickup truck and ended up in Oregon.

He was given a ride home a week later.

Bosco is gone, but not forgotten. He has definitely left his mark on this wide spot in the road — 45 miles east of San Francisco. Seems he's got a Rottweiler named Sweetpea in a family way.

The monster struggled furi- ly at first but is now resting is amphibious and needs oxygen to exist, the scientists inflate the net's air bags and bring it to the surface three times a day to allow the monster to breathe.

They are feeding it approximately 2,000 pounds of raw tuna a day, which is about half of what it would consume if it were swimming free, Dr. Genet said.

"The most intriguing thing about the monster is its demeanor, which by all accounts is good," continued the expert. "Our divers have actually gotten quite friendly with it. They

The scientific team discussed the possibility of moving the monster from the loch to a laboratory but decided that it was too risky.

They also thought about building an enormous underwater cage to keep it in but have been unable to secure the estimated $3 million it would take to finance the job.

"We are currently taking tissue and blood samples and observing the creature's behavior 24 hours a day," said Dr. Genet. "We hope to finish up by the end of April. We won't really decide what to do with the monster from the loch to a laboratory but decided that it was too risky.

WARNING: JOGGING WILL DOOM YOUR MARRIAGE!

Jogging may be hazardous to your marriage.

That's what the experts say, and they have the statistics to prove it.

Dr. Paul Milvy just completed a study of 1,893 people which showed the divorce rate of joggers is 340 percent higher than the rate of the non-runners. "My statistics are really significant," Dr. Milvy said. "There are people out there who are almost destroying their lives through running. Running changes your whole personality."

Psychologist Dr. Raymond Fowler agrees. "I have heard that there's an unusually high divorce rate among joggers," Dr. Fowler said. "And I've come across several cases myself where marriages broke up after one of the partners took up running.

"Running seems to get people in control of their lives again and it gives them confidence.

"I've had letters from people who said, 'I began to run and I began to get control over my life. Then I said this or that is a lot of rubbish and I don't have to put up with it — so I quit a bad marriage.'"

Dr. Theodeus Kostrubala, a jogger and psychiatrist who became internationally famous with his book, The Joy of Running, also agrees that jogging may spell doom for your marriage.

"It's because long distance running changes your personality dramatically," said Dr. Kostrubala. "It changes your personality as much as taking heroin — maybe more."

He said when a person runs, he starts to feel better physically and starts to look at himself and the world differently.

"You find out that the choices you made in the past, which may include marriage weren't what you really wanted.

"And running gives you the confidence to break away from that kind of situation."

SAMURAI TRAFFIC FIGHT!

Wild-eyed swordsman chops off man's fingers — for honking his horn!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

A weirdo with a razor-sharp samurai sword bolted out of his house and sliced off a motorist's fingers — because his car horn was making too much noise.

Ralph Thompson was desperately trying to make the stuck horn stop honking when a wild-eyed man rushed toward him waving the sword in the air. Thompson, 26, raised his hands to protect his face and lost two fingers.

After chopping off the forefinger and middle finger of Thumpson's right hand, the swordsman placed the weapon back in its scabbard, and marched inside.

"Another motorist came to Thompson's aid. He was rushed to a hospital with his severed fingers," said Police Inspector Douglas Trait. "Surgeons reattached them, but the success of the operation won't be known for a while."

Thompson had pulled over to the curb in the wee hours of the morning because an electrical problem caused his horn to stick. He got out of the car to try to fix it and was attacked.

Cops later took the swordsman into custody and a judge in Slough, England, ordered a psychiatric exam. The suspect was not identified.

6-year-old frozen to death — for eating candy, police say!

By SCOTTY PAUL
Staff writer

A 6-year-old girl didn't have the slightest idea when she ate two pieces of chocolate candy that it would make someone mad enough to kill her.

Angry aunt Maryann Ayala grabbed tiny Millisen Ayala and her sister Stephanie, 4, and forced them to sit in a tub of ice cold bath water for eating some of her candy without asking, cops said.

"The punishment didn't fit the crime by a long shot in this case," said New York City Police Detective Lt. John Brown. "Millisen died of hypothermia and her little sister barely survived."

The candy was taken out of a box of chocolates that had been given to the aunt. The box was in a bedroom the two little girls shared with the aunt's daughter, Flora, 15.

"Flora scolded the girls for eating the chocolates and her aunt overheard the commotion," Brown said. "The aunt hit the girls with a shoe, grabbed them by the neck and forced them to sit in the freezing water for a half hour."

Millisen's temperature dropped below 85 degrees and Stephanie passed out, cops said.

After telling Millisen to get dressed, the aunt taped the youngster's mouth shut to stop her from moaning, Brown said.

"A few minutes later they noticed she wasn't breathing and took her and Stephanie to the hospital," Brown added. "They told doctors the girls had slipped while playing in the tub."

The 6-year-old tot died in the hospital but Stephanie survived and was listed in stable condition.

Their aunt was jailed without bond, charged with mur-

DON'T LET MONEY SPATS RUIN YOUR MARRIAGE!

Expert reveals how BOTH sides can be winners in battle over buck$

By MICHAEL TODD
Special correspondent

Money. It's a major cause of bitter conflict in many marriages — and can even lead to divorce. Why? Because the husband and wife don't even try to understand each other's need for personal spending money, says Dr. James E. Kilgore, famed expert in marriage and family therapy.

In the following articles, a typical wife airs her complaints about how the family's money is divided, and a typical husband gives his side of the story. Then Dr. Kilgore, author of Getting More Family Out of Your Dollar, explains in detail how they can resolve the problem.

Wife's side:

I don't know, doctor. I try so hard to please him. I get the kids off to school, keep the house tidy and never leave a dirty dish in the sink. I don't ask for much in return — just a little spending money to buy a few things to keep me happy.

You know, every woman wants a little cash to use any way she wants to. But I can't even buy myself a new dress unless I hide a few dollars of the grocery money!

If a girlfriend calls and wants to go out for coffee, I'm always embarrassed because she always has to pick up the check.

My husband never leaves me any money for my entertainment — he keeps it all to himself, going out with the boys for beers and buying tickets to dumb football games.

He spends all the money on what he wants out of life . . . but I never get anything I want. I've tried to talk to him about this situation, but he won't even listen to me.

He says if I want anything, to just ask him for the money and he'll let me know if I'm going to get it.

I don't think that's fair, not fair at all! Why should I have to beg?

I work just as hard as he does at my job, which is keeping our home running well.

You would think that if he trusts me to take care of his house, he'd trust me with a little spending money of my own.

I'm entitled to something out of life, don't you think, doctor?

Hubby's side:

Doc, that isn't the way things are at all. I'd give her anything she wants if she asks for it. But in the past, when I've given her an allowance, she's like a kid in a candy store — blowing it on nothing.

And if I give her $3 to go out to a movie with a friend, she always claims she needs $10. She can't stay within our budget — which is so tight that we're always scrimping.

I'd hate to tell you about our one and only experience with a credit card. It took me a year to pay off the debt. She just went crazy spending.

I'm working so many hours right now that I don't know which end is up. And for what? — so she can go out and drink coffee with the dames or buy some junk that's on sale.

And if I'm the tightwad, how come I'm paying for piano lessons for our daughter and braces for our son? I think I'm as fair with money as any guy.

As I said, if my wife wants something all she has to do is ask for it.

But I won't give her any money to fritter away on nonsense we don't need.

As for her complaints about my drinking beer with the boys . . . sure, I have a beer once a week with the guys, but it's usually after we've put in overtime. I'm entitled to it.

I don't see my wife going out and working for any extra dough. All she does is sit home in our nice, comfortable house!

Here's what the doc says . . .

Both the husband and wife must recognize each other's needs. Every woman is entitled to a little spending money of her own — and every husband needs the same to bring meaning to his life.

This doesn't mean you should divide up the paycheck like the spoils of war and spend it all on yourselves. That's as wrong as not spending any. But the wife should have an allowance of her own, money she can use to maintain her dignity and independence.

No one likes to feel like a slave, having to ask for everything in life. But once you get that freedom money, you should remember that with it comes responsibility.

With demonstrated responsibility comes the respect every woman wants from her husband. You must limit your spending to that amount and not ask your husband for more.

If you want a new dress, for example, you must set aside part of your allowance to buy it.

And the husband must realize that his wife works just as hard at home as he does on the job. This, after all, is HER full-time job. The allowance given her each week is recognition of the many important and tiresome tasks she performs — like washing the clothes, taking the kids to the doctor and cleaning the house.

The husband also must be given recognition for the many hours he labors to support the family. He, too, needs spending money of his own so he can feel that life is worth living. I suggest you both sit down and add up your weekly living expenses. Subtract them from the money you have coming in, then mutually decide what you'll do with the rest.

Naturally, some of it should go into savings, but some also should be used as an allowance for each of you — to spend without having to account for it.

GO AHEAD, COMPLAIN . . . YOU'LL LIVE LONGER!

People who express their emotions and complain live longer, says world famous psychologist

Dr. John Brantner. "The strong, silent types do not live as long.

"In study after study it is the ability to share your distress with others and be a good complainer that separates survivors from non-survivors, the well-adjusted from the ill-adjusted," said the expert.

Dr. Brantner outlined some of the ingredients of effective complaining:

"Effective complainers are people who can poke fun at themselves while they are complaining.

"The effective complainers avoid all signs of self-pity and speak up when something bothers them.

"Once, I took my irritation out on a secretary during a telephone call. She said straight out, 'Don't get nasty with me!'

"She was a woman who shares her distress directly and effectively. I told her I was sorry and that I was mad at her boss and taking it out on her. The lesson is: Don't hold things in — they will hurt you!"

Dr. Sheldon Tobin helped conduct a study of 85 people waiting to enter nursing homes.

"For each person," he declared, "we tried to determine the change from before admission to a year later. Some had died, some showed extreme deterioration. Our study showed that those patients who were aggressive, irritating, demanding and self-preoccupied were the individuals that we found to be the most likely to survive.

"We found that those who died or who deteriorated were passive. People who complain do live longer. Passivity is related to giving up hope.

"Never give in! This could be applied to people of any age. If you are struck by a stressful situation, be combative. If something is wrong, complain about it."

THE GOLDEN MASK OF TUTANKAMEN

They acquired The Mask and got fabulous fortunes: Eloise Graham — Alfred Miller — Ann Harris — Rose Anderson — Nina Baratelli — James Gonzalez — Michael Wagner — Estela Cruz — Yen F. Lee — Erika Walmer — Mary Leonard — Elpidia Gimenez Rey — mysteriously won more than 1 MILLION. Take a look at some of their testimonies.

My name is William Shake. I was born in Manchester, England and I wish to speak to all the people who have been followed by bad luck for most of their lives. Those people who always lose, who never progress, and who want to have more money and can't? Those who think that making too much money is impossible.

The following people give their testimonies. They sent for the Golden Mask of Tutankamen, famous around the world, and in a short time after receiving it their lives changed forever. Here are some of their testimonials:

Since I've had the mask hanging on my neck, I've won three jackpots at the Casino. I purchased a beautiful home, and today I collect antique gold jewelry. Eloise Graham.

I ordered the mask and in two months I made three real estate deals with a small amount of money and I made $1,250,000 profit. Alfred Miller

I purchased the mask in Egypt and upon my return I met a millionaire who is my husband today. Ann Harris

It was incredible. I purchased the golden mask and that same night I dreamed the 6 numbers that came out in the California Lotto. Rose Anderson

I am very happy. I didn't believe in anything like that. The Golden Mask of Tutankamen was given to me and in a few days I inherited a fortune from a relative I never met. I will forever be grateful to King Tut. Nina Baratelli

I bet my last dollar with the golden mask right in my right hand. I won and since then I have been winning at everything. My family could not believe it. Today we are rich and wherever I go, the Mask of Tutankamen goes with me. Everyone in my family has their own. James Gonzalez

START WINNING NOW!

I want you to imagine yourself winning a lot of extra money. More than a lot. In huge quantities like those people who give their testimonials. They were people who suffered, had difficulties, but were able to reach happiness, luck and money thanks to the Golden Mask of Tutankamen. Stop losing now!

I guarantee that with The Golden Mask of Tutankamen you will be able to obtain all that you desire. Did you know that this mask protects many famous people? Stars that you see every day on television, governmental officials and powerful employers have it, but they never admit it. Did you know that it protects them from negative influences and envy? Did you know that there are people who have the Golden Mask as a very strong symbol of power and money? Don't say, "I don't believe in these things." What benefits comes to the skeptic or to the disbeliever?

Don't wait a moment longer for your life to change overnight. You will be able to fulfill all your wishes. Furthermore, you will lose absolutely nothing. This bet I will make with you: If you do not obtain extra cash money within 30 days, you can return it and we will return your money. What do you lose? Nothing!

The Golden Mask of Tutankamen comes with "The Method and Secret Directions for Your Personal Use." In these instructions, I explain what to do with it, how to ask for wishes, how to take care of it, and how to wear it.

It would be very sad for you to allow this unique opportunity for all your wishes to come true to pass without taking advantage of it. It is the opportunity to try something different for the first time. Something magic, new, miraculous. Just once in a lifetime. What can you lose?

Bird-brained crook swipes prize pigeons — and they fly home!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Some idiot crook swiped 25 homing pigeons from a bird sanctuary and eight of the danged things flew back home within 48 hours.

The trained, very rare pigeons were taken from a bird sanctuary near Dallas, Tex., after closing hours and under cover of darkness.

"The first chance they get, those birds are going to come straight back here," said Dennis D. Smith, who operates the county bird sanctuary.

Smith knows his birds. He no sooner had reported the theft when some of the homing pigeons began flying back to their home. By nightfall of the second day, eight of the pigeons were back in their cages, cops said.

Police speculate the pigeon thieves may have stolen the birds to start their own breeding stock. If that's the case, Smith said the crooks wasted their time.

Once homing pigeons are uprooted they won't breed for a long time, Smith explained.

Police have made no arrests in the case.

Bus driver sues her boss over spanking

After sending her several love letters detailing his sexual fantasies for over 18 months, Tina Gimarelli said day, "You deserve a good spanking."

Then he smacked her on the rear end.

She eventually resigned as a bus driver in Ulster County, N.Y., and filed a suit charging sexual harassment.

Space aliens are kidnapping the homeless!

By RACHEL COUCH / Special correspondent

A leading UFO expert says space aliens are kidnapping homeless men, women and children at a rate of more than 100 a day.

And if they keep it up America's most embarrassing social problem — the plight of the street people — could disappear completely!

That is the word from Dr. James Carnes, who claims the U.S. government couldn't be happier about the situation and is refusing even to discuss it because the fewer homeless people we have, the better off the government is.

And the government couldn't be happier, expert says!

Dr. James Carnes says there is a cover-up.

"Nobody wants to say anything about it because the homeless are such an embarrassment to this country but if space aliens were kidnapping all rich folks or politicians Washington would be screaming bloody murder," Carnes, founder and president of the UFO research group Extra-terrestrial Quest, told newsmen in Birmingham, Ala.

"Federal agencies and officials have been monitoring the situation since 1988," he continued, "and by their own estimates the aliens have kidnapped over 100,000 people in the past three years alone."

Spokesmen for the White House, State Department and Pentagon refused to comment on the researcher's report and would neither confirm nor deny his allegations of a cover-up.

Carnes said he got his information from highly placed government insiders "who literally risked their careers to get the truth out."

According to the expert's report, the extra-terrestrial kidnappers "beam" their victims directly into starships while they remain in an orbit around Earth. That way their crimes go undetected by the average citizen.

"Nobody knows what the extraterrestrials are doing with their victims but I wouldn't be surprised if they're using them to conduct some kind of fiendish medical experiments," said Carnes.

"It's also possible that they want human slaves to perform menial tasks and labor on their home planet, but since most homeless people have abysmally poor work records, I seriously doubt it."

Carnes thinks the U.S. government can and should do something to stop the kidnappings but isn't at all hopeful it will.

"There's no incentive to help the homeless," the expert said. "If there was, we wouldn't have all these poor people living in boxes and scrounging for food in such a pitiful fight for their very survival."

HELPLESS and homeless people like these are under attack from space aliens.

Japs watch out!

New German car never needs repair!

By MICKEY McGUIRE
Correspondent

Japan's domination of the world auto industry will brake to a screeching halt when Germany unveils its incredible engineering miracle — a lifetime car that repairs itself!

The amazing car is called Das Liebenszeitenwagon, which, somewhat loosely translated, means "the lifetime car."

The car's engine is built entirely from computer-designed, self-repairing "smart parts" made of superhard ceramic materials similar to the tiles used on the Space Shuttle's heat shield.

That amazing engine is mated to a one-piece, no-rust, carbon-fiber body and the entire car carries a no-loophole lifetime money-back guarantee.

Japanese officials have nervously suspected that German engineers were at the threshold of a major breakthrough, but never in their worst nightmares did they expect it would be something that could virtually put their nation's auto industry out of existence.

"Japanese auto makers are quaking in their boots," said Wolfgang Broder, spokesman for the unnamed consortium that has financed the car's 27-year-long research and development program in three major German industrial centers.

SPOKESMAN Wolfgang Broder tempts the public with bits of info about the new car.

"They know that we plan to publicly unveil our revolutionary car at the Paris Auto Show later this year and they know it will be the beginning of the end of their dominance of the world auto market.

"Never before in automotive history has such a car as ours been seen. Imagine! People will be able to buy a car and never — not ever — will it wear out or break down. People will have a car powered by an engine and components that actually repair themselves as they are used.

"Everything on or in the car is self-repairing. Even the tires are made of a compound that will never wear out.

"If you own a lifetime car, the only reason for buying a new one would be to appease your own ego by owning the latest model because the car will never wear out.

"In a matter of a few short months, the mastery of precise German engineering and workmanship will be supreme."

Old man died — when his leg got stuck in floor

Hapless Bob Bradley froze to death in his own kitchen after his leg got stuck in a hole in the rotten floor!

Authorities in Syracuse, N.Y., said neighbors began to worry when the 70-year-old man didn't leave his unheated home for three days and alerted police, who found Bradley with his head resting on his hands and his leg stuck tight in the floor.

Wife sues hubby for making a wrong turn!

Couple is robbed after he gets lost and drives into crime-ridden neighborhood!

By SHAWN DEENA
Staff writer

Housewife Christine Lauritzen says she warned her dimwitted hubby not to drive through a crime-ridden neighborhood but the bonehead ignored her advice — and now she's suing him because they got robbed.

Brett Lauritzen stubbornly drove through a bad section of Miami Beach, Fla., then got lost. When the couple stopped to ask for directions, someone threw a brick through the passenger side of their car window and robbed them.

Mrs. Lauritzen suffered injuries to her face and hands and is suing her harebrained husband for $5,000 in medical bills plus $30,000 for pain, scarring and emotional distress.

"Brett Lauritzen's defense was 'I didn't want to admit my wife was right,'" said Stanley Rumbaugh, Mrs. Lauritzen's attorney. "But this isn't about marriage, this is about responsibility.

"The issue of this case is whether or not a driver is responsible for a passenger in the event of an accident, regardless of marital or family relationship," he explained.

The incident occurred when the Tacoma, Wash., couple stopped in Miami Beach overnight on their way back from a vacation in the Caribbean. Mrs. Lauritzen claims she and her husband went shopping in a nearby region late in the afternoon.

The couple planned to go back to the hotel after shopping and received explicit directions from a parking lot attendant. But foolish Brett ignored these directions, made a wrong turn and kept going, according to the suit.

"Mr. Lauritzen told his wife he wanted to take the scenic route even though he knew he was going the wrong way," Rumbaugh said.

"If he had turned left instead of right, all of this would have never happened."

WOMAN DIES FROM DRINKING TOO MUCH WATER!

DENVER, Colo. — Patricia Carpenter loved to drink water so much she overdosed on it and died.

"She was always thirsty," said her boyfriend, who found the 56-year-old woman dead in their apartment. "She would drink a pitcher of ice water or a two liter bottle of water in one sitting. She acted like a person who's drunk and is trying to work off the effects of alcohol. But she hadn't had any liquor in more than a year."

Coroner Tom Henry diagnosed the woman's death as acute water intoxication.

"What happens is too much water in the body causes the salt concentration to drop below normal levels and the kidneys can't get rid of the fluid fast enough, so you die," Henry said.

"Basically anything in excess can kill you and she was drinking gallons at a time."

A normal kidney can handle more than five gallons of water a day.

"She was addicted to water, she drank too much of it on a daily basis," he said.

'She was always thirsty,' says her boyfriend

Carpenter first encountered problems three months ago sumption sent her into convulsions and she was hospitalized. Carpenter cut down her water consumption and was drinking barely a quart a day but evidently returned to her normal drinking habits a few days before her death.

The night before she died she went into convulsions again, her boyfriend said, but afterward everything was all right.

"By late evening she seemed to be resting easily," he said. "When I woke up, she was dead."

Police found the apartment littered with at least a half-dozen glasses of water.

"She was a water fanatic,"

YOUR SIGNATURE TELLS WHAT YOU THINK OF YOURSELF!

The size of your signature reveals a lot about your self-esteem, according to studies by world famous psychologist, Dr. Richard Zweigenhaft.

He found that people write larger as their social status rises, or after they've done something noteworthy.

"More than a name is revealed in a signature — signatures are a valuable window into the mind," declares Dr. Zweigenhaft.

"There is a relationship between how large someone signs his name and how the person feels about himself."

In one fascinating experiment, Dr. Zweigenhaft asked three different groups of people, professors, blue-collar workers and students, to sign their names on blank cards.

"The professors signed their names larger — because of their status," he said.

"The blue-collar workers wrote smaller than the professors — but larger than the students. Status was the major factor."

In another study, the professor found that women generally write smaller than men. He said it's because "women have less status in our culture."

And in a third study, he led half of a group of students to believe they'd done well on a test, and the other half to believe they'd done poorly.

"The ones who had been led to believe they had done well wrote significantly larger," he said. "If you're feeling good about something, quite often your signature can show it."

Dr. Zweigenhaft said his findings aren't just an American phenomenon.

He did a similar study about Iran, comparing high-status men and women. "We found the exact same pattern in a culture in which the writing goes from right to left, which suggests this window in the mind is universal, not just true of Americans," he said.

Hard-up Russkies use motor oil for cooking!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Desperate Russians are so hard-up for cooking oil that they're frying their potatoes and cabbage in a substitute — pure, unadulterated motor oil!

A haze of blue smoke hangs over residential neighborhoods in cities like Moscow, St. Petersburg and Kiev as housewives cook up their special recipes in bubbling pots of 30-weight oil.

"It doesn't taste so bad once you get used to it," said Karina Malanovna, a mother of three from Moscow. "Besides, what choice have we? We have no butter, no salad oil, not even any lard.

"We couldn't fry our foods without the motor oil — and all of our favorite foods are fried."

Worried health authorities say they have conducted no long-term studies that reveal whether consuming motor oil causes illness. But they fear that additives in the petroleum can be cancer-causing and that air pollution produced by cooking with the stuff could trigger mass problems with bronchitis, asthma and lung disease.

'It doesn't taste so bad,' says housewife — but health officials are worried

Already air pollution levels in major Russian cities have soared above normal as hungry families crisp up their potato pancakes in sizzling motor oil.

The fumes and haze have been blamed for an increase in respiratory problems and even airport traffic has been affected by the cooking smog.

Western medical experts say the motor-oil mania is extremely dangerous and may doom millions of Russians to an early death, but so far the Russian government has done nothing to discourage the alarming trend.

"They have nothing else to give the people, so they basically have said, 'Let them eat goop,'" said Dr. Alan Baxter, head of a group specializing in the health impact of the petroleum industry. "It's terrible. It's going to hurt a lot of innocent people."

LONG lines and widespread food shortages confound shoppers throughout the republics of the former Soviet Union. Frustrated housewives are now frying their food in motor oil, say news reports.

School bus rolls over when driver gets into a paper-wad fight with the kids!

By SHAWN DEENA
Staff writer

School bus driver Bobby Roberts was too involved in a paper-wad fight to notice his bus careening down a 60-foot embankment — and nearly killed the 23 kids on board, say officials!

A 25-count indictment alleges Roberts, 25, turned around to retaliate as the bus headed off the County, Ky. The runaway bus flipped over and some of the 23 kids were permanently disabled in the accident.

Roberts pleaded not guilty to the charges of wanton endangerment but has very little going in his favor, according to with the steering wheel," Campbell said. "But this bus was new and we had it checked. There was nothing wrong with it.

"This guy was an inexperienced driver, and obviously was more concerned about

Roberts' only chance for a lesser punishment depends on the sentiments of the kids he almost killed and their parents, Campbell said.

"I'm trying to get a general consensus on how far they want to take this," he said.

LACY LADY

European supermodel Corinna Russell shows off some sexy lingerie.

Gals, want a top job?

DON'T LOOK SEXY!

"Beautiful women will actually fare worse than plain Janes if they apply for a 'male' job like car salesman, executive or mechanic," says a leading psychiatrist.

Dr. Frank Caprio, author of more than 30 books, analyzed several studies on the subject and found that pretty women are at a definite disadvantage in seeking jobs traditionally held by men.

"Pretty women are considered more feminine than average women — and people tend to think that feminine means weak," he said.

"But pretty women will be the first ones to be hired for 'female' or secretarial-type jobs in many cases."

In a way they are like glittering diamonds — something beautiful that will impress people.

"But they aren't usually thought of as real go-getters."

Dr. Caprio said that a study conducted by researchers at the Old Dominion University showed that average-looking women did better at being hired for typical 'male' jobs than pretty women.

"Other research has found that beautiful women would normally fare worse than plain Janes and men at being hired for executive jobs."

According to the Old Dominion University study, women did better than men at getting such traditionally "female" jobs like receptionists.

In jobs equally held by men and women, attractive people — regardless of sex — had a better chance of being hired than average-looking people, the study showed.

"Researchers also found that whenever a man succeeds at a 'masculine' job, people tend to think that it's because of his ability," said Dr. Caprio.

"But when a woman is successful, it's attributed more to luck."

New study urges pregnant gals to kick the habit...

Smoking moms' babies grow up to be brats!

By SUSAN JIMISON
Staff writer

Smoking moms have naughty kids, a surprising new study shows.

Mothers who smoke two or more packs of cigarettes a day during pregnancy or after their kids are born are twice as likely to have children with behavior problems as mothers who don't smoke at all.

According to pediatrics expert Michael Weitzman, this holds true even considering factors like weight, race, sex, age of child, number of parents in the home, the mother's age and education level.

"No one has clearly explained the link between maternal smoking and behavior problems," says Weitzman, who studied 3,577 mothers and their 4- to 15-year-old children to come up with his shocking findings. "But I can tell you there are more than 2,000 chemicals in cigarette smoke and no one has studied what they do to the brain or other organs.

"Nobody is raising the alarm about smoking's effects on kids, but we need to be concerned about this."

Weitzman, who teaches at the University of Rochester in New York, found that children born to smokers were twice as likely to score badly on a behavior test he devised as children born to folks who don't smoke. The test included 32 items and asked parents to indicate whether their children were occasionally or continually destructive, cruel or mean. He asked them to indicate if their kids had trouble at school or with friends and whether or not they were sorry when they misbehaved. Smoking moms were much more likely to indicate their kids were troublemakers, the survey found.

But behavior problems are not the only result of cigarette addiction, Weitzman says. Smoking moms also subject their kids to other terrible problems. The habit has been linked to low education achievement, lower IQ levels, asthma and low birth weight, among other ills.

"Cigarette smoke is inhaled by the mother and the placenta constricts," Dr. Weitzman said.

"That restricts the blood flow to the fetus, reducing oxygen levels in its brain. Carbon monoxide contained in the smoke goes to the baby, too.

"And when a pregnant woman smokes, the concentration of nicotine is higher in the baby's blood than it is in the mother's.

"We know that 10 percent of all infant deaths could be avoided if we got women to stop smoking."

AMERICA'S top brat, Bart Simpson, takes aim with his slingshot. He's one of the few pain-in-the-butt kids whose mother doesn't smoke.

Cop tries to arrest ref at a basketball game — 'cause he didn't call foul!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

An off-duty cop got caught up in the emotion of a hotly-contested high school basketball game and tried to arrest a referee for not calling a foul on the visiting team.

ACTION-PACKED basketball game similar to the one between rival teams in Okla.

Police Sgt. Eugene Wyatt walked onto the playing floor during overtime in a game between Star-Spencer and Douglas High in Oklahoma City and grabbed referee Stan Guffey.

"We had an injury timeout and Wyatt walks onto the floor and says, 'Number 21 has been elbowing and Number 32 has been elbowing and you guys haven't stopped it,'" Guffey said.

"I said, 'Sir, I don't know who you are, but you don't have any business on the floor.'"

That's when the angry off-duty cop told Guffey he was under arrest and shoved him off the court. The amazed referee was escorted out of the gym and into an office where police met with game and conference officials.

One of those who left the spur-of-the-moment meeting scratching his head in disbelief after 10 minutes was conference commissioner Charley Greene.

"To be honest, I don't know what Wyatt said, he said so much," Greene remarked.

"In my opinion, he didn't have any legitimate justification for coming on the court like that. I was trying to explain the procedure of handling problems on the court, but I wasn't too good at communicating with him. He wouldn't listen."

Wyatt said he was worried because the crowd was getting very emotional. "I observed gang members giving signs to each other," he said. "And some of them had moved to the lower floor."

"Officer Wyatt had no business sticking his nose into a situation where it didn't belong," said a detective familiar with the case. "He got carried away and made a fool out of himself."

High school administrators, coaches and referees — not police — are responsible for solving problems on the playing court.

"We had no problems until the police came out there and tried to show some authority," Guffey said. "Why? I don't know.

"If we had a big fight break out on the floor or in the stands, then they can help. It's not their job to tell us how to officiate a game."

The bizarre incident is being investigated by the internal affairs division of the police department.

Star-Spencer won the low-scoring game, 44-43 in overtime.

Court thaws frozen head

Wife kills 'cheating' hubby — then learns he was working late to buy her a new sports car!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Trigger-happy housewife Katerina Rieck was so sure her hubby Herbert was sneaking around with some bimbo every night that she borrowed a gun and blew his brains out.

Then the murderous missus learned that Herbert hadn't been seeing another woman after all. He'd been secretly working a second job — to buy cantankerous Katerina a brand-new Porsche for her birthday!

"It was just a mistake, a ghastly, terrible mistake," the shaken lady insisted after jurors convicted her of second-degree murder. "Herbie was trying to do something nice for me and I thought he was running around behind my back.

JEALOUS wife Katerina killed her hubby for working late.

MURDERED hubby Herbie wanted to buy his wife a car.

'It was a terrible mistake,' says crazed housewife

"I feel very bad about what happened — but it's his fault, too. I told him when I married him that I'd kill him if he ever tried to keep secrets from me."

The tragic tale of jealousy and vengeance began last summer when the mousy, 44-year-old bank worker decided to surprise his wife with a spanking-new sports car.

"Katerina nagged and bullied that poor guy unmercifully, but God help him, he loved her and he'd never have cheated on her — never," Herbert's heartsick sister Santa told reporters in Bern, Switzerland.

"He even got a night job doing the books for a rich guy he met at the bank, just trying to make enough money to buy her a car for her birthday. He worked every Monday, Friday and Sunday night for weeks, telling Katerina his boss was keeping him late at the bank."

Eventually Katerina, 39, got suspicious and drove to the bank to spy on her hubby.

"I got there just in time to see him get into a fancy car with a gorgeous blonde," the hotheaded housewife recalled. "I learned later that the woman was married to Mr. van Roos, the guy my husband had been working for at night. It turns out that Mr. van Roos was in the car with them, but I didn't see him in there.

"All I saw was my Herbert driving off with some blonde, and that made me crazy. I drove home and stewed about it for hours."

Then she went to a neighbor's house and borrowed a revolver, telling him she was worried about prowlers.

"All I could think about was killing Herbert for cheating on me," the widow told the court. "When he came home that night, I walked up behind him, put the gun in his ear and fired. Afterwards I was sorry for what I'd done — especially when I learned he was working overtime to buy me a Porsche."

KILLER DROWNS IN HIS VICTIM'S BLOOD!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Kill-crazy creep Daniel Baccaro butchered 10 defenseless women just to watch them die. But fate took sweet revenge the night the beastly Baccaro slashed a hapless secretary to death — then drowned in his victim's blood!

Cops found the ill-fated lady-killer pinned beneath the mutilated body of 243-pound Teresa Torterolo, who died when the brutal Baccaro broke into her apartment and slit her throat from ear to ear.

"The medical examiner concluded that Miss Torterolo toppled onto her killer and stunned him so he was unable to get free," police investigator Enrique Dabilla told reporters in Caracas, Venezuela. "The man sliced through her jugular, and so much blood flowed down into his nose and mouth that he actually drowned in it.

"The last minutes of his life were pure hell, but that's just what the monster deserved."

Cops say the balding bookkeeper had left a trail of butchered bodies from one end of Caracas to the other, entering the homes of single career girls and slashing them to shreds with a straight razor.

But the slaughter came to a grisly end the night the cold-blooded Baccaro slipped into Teresa's apartment and cut the 48-year-old secretary's throat with one savage thrust of his blade.

"He attacked her from behind and apparently pulled her right over on top of him," Detective Dabilla said. "Her life's blood gushed onto Mr. Baccaro and he drowned in the stuff.

"The guy had a real thirst for blood — but he obviously got more than he bargained for."

How to unlock the REAL meaning of your dreams!

By SUSAN JIMISON
Staff writer

You can wake up to the hidden meanings of your dreams, says a top author — just by knowing the most common dream symbols and what they say about your life.

The recurring symbols offer a peek into the subconscious emotions and concerns that influence your actions each day. Deciphering their meaning can help you understand how your mind works and gain more control over your life.

"No one knows why we dream, but we do know that dreaming is very good for us," says Nerys Dee, author of Your Dreams And What They Mean.

"What appear to be everyday objects become symbols in our dreams. By recognizing the symbols and understanding your emotions surrounding them, you can unlock the secrets of your dreams."

Dee has provided a list of the 10 most common dream symbols, along with an explanation of their hidden meanings, to help you discover the deep currents that rule your life.

Heights: A dream about being at the very top of a mountain, cliff or skyscraper indicates that you are ambitious. You feel you have accomplished something and have risen to great heights. But you also can look down and see the terrifying distance to the ground.

Falling: You are telling yourself that you are over-confident and need to come down a peg or two.

Houses: In your dreams, a house represents you. If you wander through hallways and past closed doors, you're feeling very confused. Generally speaking, the higher up in the house you go, the better you feel about yourself. Dreams that you are in the basement indicate that you have swept important things under the rug and they will emerge soon.

Water: In the dream world, water symbolizes your emotions. If you are carried along on that you feelings are overwhelming you. Very hot or very cold water indicates you feel you are in trouble.

Flying: Soaring above the clouds means you feel free, confident and sure of attaining your goals. It's an optimistic sign that you feel you can rise above your problems and achieve your ambitions.

Darkness: Lost in the dark in your dream world? You probably feel you're being kept in the dark about something in your real life. Darkness also can indicate you are feeling depressed about events.

Adultery: Playing around in your dreams doesn't necessarily indicate you have sex on your mind. It's more likely to symbolize guilt over something.

Teeth: If you dream that your teeth are falling out, chances are you expect great changes in your life. Moving, changing jobs, getting married or divorced — all such major events can bring on this dream, probably because losing our teeth as babies is a sign we are undergoing profound changes and growing up.

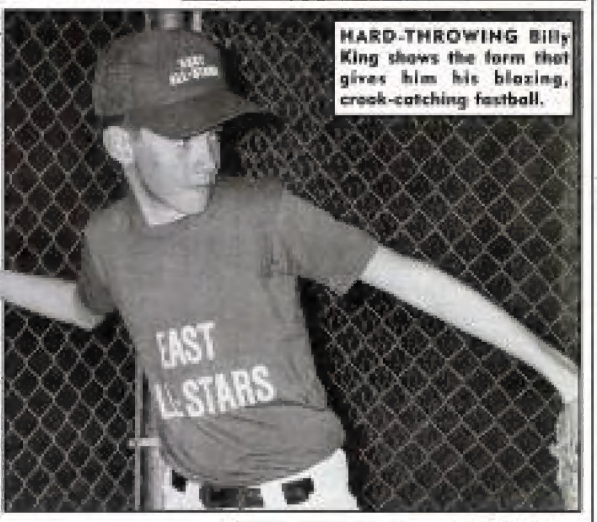
A Baby: Babies represent ideas in the dream world. They indicate you have an idea with great promise or a new ambition for the future. How you greet that baby in your dream can indicate how you feel about a new project. If you greet it lovingly, you feel confident. If you reject it, you are afraid of failure.

Getting Lost: You are probably unsure of your direction in life if you dream of being lost.

10-year-old pitcher stops purse snatcher — with a fastball to the head!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Two-bit tough guy Felix Sapeda swiped a lady's purse at a Little League baseball game and was making a clean getaway till pint-size pitcher Billy King took aim from the mound — and caved in the creep's skull with a blazing fastball!



HARD-THROWING Billy King shows the form that gives him his blazing, crook-catching fastball.

"Billy's really a skinny little fella, but he's got a rocket arm for a 10-year-old kid, that's for sure," boasted coach Calvin Tusten, 52.

"He was getting ready to pitch to a batter when everybody screamed and he saw this jerk running down along the third base line with the woman's purse in his hands. So Billy just let fly — and coldcocked that big bruiser in his tracks."

Sapeda, 26, was hospitalized with a fractured skull and is awaiting trial on charges of assault and robbery.

"The guy's probably going to jail, but he's lucky Billy didn't kill him," said a tickled Coach Tusten.

Sticky-fingered Sapeda got his comeuppance the day he happened by a Southern California Little League game, snatched a purse and tried to hightail it out of the park.

"Apparently he just saw the crowd and figured there'd be some easy pickings around there," a police investigator told reporters.

"He walked around behind the bleachers, grabbed a purse off the fourth or fifth row up and made a run for it. His victim spotted him and started screaming her head off."

And that's when fireballing Billy turned into a crimebuster.

"I was standing on the mound when I heard everybody hollering and pointing at the guy running down toward third," the half-pint hurler recalled.

"I thought, 'Boy, I bet I could bean him if I tried,' so I wound up and threw it as hard as I could. I got him in the ear and he went right on down.

"I ran up to him and he was lying on the ground, out cold."

Cops said the zapped purse snatcher is a twice-convicted mugger who'd led cops on a merry chase since his release from prison 18 months ago.

"He'd managed to outrun the police pretty good," said one delighted lawman. "But he couldn't outrun that little boy's fastball."

PROUD coach Calvin Tusten.

BRAVE Cristal Anguio carried her brother to safety when the two kids got caught in a crossfire. The little girl, shown here with her dad Angel, has recovered from her wounds.

11-year-old girl's incredible act of bravery — with a bullet in her heart!

Caught in the crossfire of a street gang shoot-out, heroic 11-year-old Cristal Anguio snatched up her brother and carried him to safety — even though a stray bullet had pierced her heart!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Cristal didn't let on that she had been wounded until after she had her 2-year-old brother Rafael safely in the house. Then she said, "I don't feel good," and crumpled to the floor more dead than alive.

"She thought only of her little brother, not of herself," Maria Anguio said of her daughter, as the critically wounded youngster fought for her life in a Los Angeles hospital. "She has always been such a good little girl. Why did this have to happen to her?"

What happened to Cristal Anguio is something that's been happening far too often in the streets of America.

On a Sunday afternoon, Cristal was taking Rafael to an ice cream truck that had stopped outside their home in south-central L.A.

Suddenly gunshots rang out and bullets filled the air. One of the wild slugs drilled Cristal in the heart. But the shock and the pain didn't stop her from carrying her brother to safety. Then darkness swept over her and she dropped to the floor.

Cristal was rushed to the hospital and underwent several operations to mend the terrible damage done to her tiny heart. She has now recovered from her wounds, say authorities.

Los Angeles police have nabbed three suspects in the near-deadly shoot-out — Zarricor Glasper, 27, Tony Davis, 24, and a 17-year-old boy. All are charged with attempted murder and are being held in the L.A. County Jail.

Healthy girl born to woman artificially

I HAD MY BABY BY

YOUNG mom Maria Tomasello says she was happy to participate in the first known procedure to use sperm from a dead man to create life.

By SCOTTY PAUL
Correspondent

In a miraculous new medical breakthrough, a young woman has given birth to a normal, healthy baby girl — fathered by a 4,000-year-old man.

The extraordinary announcement was made by doctors who have been conducting controversial genetic experiments to determine if it is possible to use dead sperm to create live offspring.

"I believe we have answered our own question with a definite 'Yes.' We have created life from death," Dr. Willard Tomasello said in a press statement released in Asheville, N.C.

The mother, Maria, 24, is the wife of one of the doctors who has been involved in extensive gene therapy tests. The father's a 4,000-year-old, Bronze Age man whose perfectly preserved body was found in a Danish peat bog last year.

Using technology pioneered by scientists at the University of Japan, the doctors succeeded in producing live, normal rabbits and cattle by injecting single, dead sperm directly into mature eggs.

"My wife agreed to be the human guinea pig for the experiments which were not deemed to be necessarily life-threatening," Tomasello said.

"We then contacted scientists at the University of Aarhus and obtained several vials of sperm extracted from the body of the Bronze Age father."

The first attempt ended in a miscarriage. The second attempt resulted in the birth of a 7-pound, 8-ounce girl. Medical specialists carefully monitored the mother during her pregnancy and have continued to do so since the baby's birth six months ago.

"We have the mother's permission to continue monitoring the child for the benefit of science," Tomasello said. "This is a special baby. A child of the ages.

"So far we have found nothing to indicate this baby is any different than any other child in the maternity ward at this hospital. There is no way to tell that her father died 4,000 years ago."

Doctors have made incredible inseminated with sperm from dead body found in peat bog!

A 4,000-YEAR-OLD MAN!

strides in genetic testing in recent years, much to the dismay of religious leaders who have accused them of tampering with Mother Nature.

By altering the genetic makeup of a person, doctors have been able to change a sickly 4-year-old girl into a healthy, strapping 5-year-old.

They are now experimenting with gene therapy that can make a dumb child smart, a short person taller and possibly even reduce the threat of cancer.

But Tomasello and his colleagues are the first known doctors to have successfully used the sperm of a dead man to create life.

"Our earlier experiments with rabbits and cattle proved that a single, dead sperm cell could play a role as a stimulus to the egg cell during conception," Tomasello said. "And now that we proved this dead cell can help produce a baby, there could be hope for men who suffer from infertility."

Some religious leaders say doctors are tampering with God by correcting mistakes in the human body through gene therapy. Tomasello disagrees.

"We are not a group of mad scientists creating a Frankenstein monster.

"We are using our God-given talents to help humanity," he said.

"MY wife was impregnated with sperm taken from this ancient man whose body was recovered from a bog," says Dr. Tomasello, shown here with his new daughter.

Japanese bigwig tells Americans: 'Eat your poor people!'

A brazen Japanese businessman says upper and middle class Americans would have a lot more money and enjoy a higher standard of living if we killed and ate all our poor people.

Incredibly, Morio Hidaka wasn't kidding. He truly believes that poor folks are a burden on the U.S. economy. He also thinks that the well-to-do "should hunt them down like deer and put them on the dinner table before the whole damn country goes down the tubes.

By MARGOT TANNER
Special correspondent

"The United States used to be the fabled land of opportunity but those days are long gone and everyone clearly knows why," Hidaka, chairman of Hidaka Tool Works, told reporters in Tokyo.

"America's poor are dragging the country down day by day," he continued.

"And if U.S. taxpayers had any sense they would kill and eat these vermin, these stupid cattle, to cleanse the nation of a festering wound.

"They would certainly have more money to spend on themselves because they wouldn't be supporting the poor," he added.

"The bottom line? Americans are stupid."

Hidaka's comments touched off a storm of controversy that the Japanese government desperately tried to suppress.

Unfortunately, the tool tycoon's comments hit the wires just a few minutes after he made them and instantly started turning up in newspapers all over the planet.

The White House declined to comment on Hidaka's suggestion, apparently hoping that the controversy would blow over.

But Washington insiders privately conceded that the Bush administration is furious because relations between the two countries are already strained at best.

A World War II vet who lost his job when the economy nosedived after the Gulf War didn't pull any punches when he was asked for his reaction. "If this Hidaka clown wants to kill and eat somebody, let him try to kill and eat me," said the former real estate salesman. "I'll rip his heart out of his chest and stomp on it."

Hidaka has been unavailable for further comment but Japanese newspapers quoted friends and associates as saying that he meant what he said and wouldn't take it back.

"Hidaka speaks his mind and lets the chips fall where they may," said one friend. "As far as he's concerned he gave America some good advice and nothing on Earth will make him take it back."
